TYPE CAST: It's going to be like déjà vu all over again in Dallas when the former Texas School Depository building is again returned to its 1963 appearance to star in another movie about the JFK assassination. Oliver Stone's film crews are repainting the building in its 1991 colors and dismantling the 1963 facade built for the film, JFK, starring Kevin Costner. In August, Lava Films of Hollywood again will recreate the building's old look for its film, Ruby. "How many times can we repaint those windows before we have to strip them and start over?" County Commissioner Jim Jackson complained.
